

News of Tennessee Science

DR. A.J. SHARP HONORED

On November 19, 1987, The University of Tennessee Arboretum Society in Knoxville presented a plaque to Dr. A.J. Sharp inscribed "With deepest appreciation for distinguished service, loyalty, and devotion to the society." At the same time, the society conferred life membership on Dr. Sharp with the title of Director Emeritus.

On February 6, 1988, Bat Conservation International, Inc. of Austin, Texas, conferred honorary life membership to Dr. A.J. Sharp "In recognition of all your encouragement and assistance."

Dr. Sharp is a professor emeritus in the Department of Botany, The University of Tennessee, Knoxville, and is a member of many year's standing in the Tennessee Academy of Science.

TENNESSEE STUDENTS HONORED

Six Tennessee high school students were named members of the Honors Group in the 47th annual Science Talent Search, the nation's top science competition. The announcement was made by Science Service of Washington, D.C., which conducts the competition. Three hundred of the 1,339 entrants in the competition were selected for the Honors Group. The Tennessee winners are: Angela Jean Malin, Camden; Pamela Sue Heady, Germantown; Maxie Louetta Jordan, Knoxville; Abigail Esther Goldberg, Nashville; Tricia Lynn Huang, Nashville; and Shih-yin Ho, Oak Ridge.